Sentinels of Health
Don't Neglect Them!

Nature designed the kidneys to do a marvelous job. Their task is to keep the flowing blood stream free of poisonous waste impurities. The act of living—life itself—constantly produces nerve-irritating waste matter the kidneys must remove from the blood if good health is to endure.

When the kidneys lag in this function of Nature intended, there is retention of poisons that may cause body-wide distress. One may suffer nagging backache, persistent headache, attacks of dizziness, getting up nights, leg pains, swelling. Users everywhere rave. Read what 38 were said:

Frequent, scanty or burning passages are sometimes further evidence of kid- ney or bladder disorder.

The recognized and proper treatment is to use a diuretic medicine to help the kidneys get rid of waste. Use Doan's Pills. Doan's Pills have had more than 50 years of public approval. Are endorsed by users the country over. Insist on Doan's. Used at all drug stores.

Vegetable Laxative Makes Happy Friends

Here's a laxative that usually acts thoroughly as harsher ones but is a gentle persuader for tiredness when used this way: A quarter to a half-teaspoonful of spicy, aromatic BLACK-DRAUGHT in your tongue tonight; a drink of water. There's usually time for a good night's rest, with a gentle, thorough action next morning relieving constipation's headaches, biliousness, sour stomach, bad breath.

BLACK-DRAUGHT is a splendid combination of vegetable ingredients, chief of which is an "intestinal tonic-laxative" that helps impart tone to lazy bowel muscles. It's economical. 25 to 40 doses: 25c.

There Were Two Irishmen—

By J. Y. BARBER
(McClure Syndicate—WNU Service.)

SEUMAS GAVAN was Number One man and the only Irishman in the fourth ward—and there wasn't the whisper of a doubt about that. On Monday he lamented the need of hiring a dago to tend bar for him in his South street speakeasy, but by Saturday he was glad of it. Irish- men aren't temperamentally suited for co-operative employment; they won't do as they're told. He was glad his blue-eyed Kathleen never argued with her father.

Way back in the ancestry there may have been some weak strain that accounted for her passivity. It made Seumas more conscious than ever that he was the only Irish- man in the ward. The only man of intellect and discernment, he'd almost say, except for that scaven- ger of the streets, Adolphus Gon- werz, whose insufferable exposes ap- peared now and again between the scrofulous lines of the local paper.

'Twas a black day indeed when Kathleen met Adolphus Gonwerz in the bar where Kathleen had no busi- ness at all. And a curse on the day when she came to her kind old father, him that was nearly killed with worry over trying to get a re- spectable liquor license, to ask his good will to their marriage.

"He's not the man," Seumas said abruptly.

"How, not the man?" Kathleen said, too quietly even for her.

"He's the sort," said Seumas, "who writes about people that have died of murder. And it's insulting, he is, when he blackguards some worthy citizen in public life."

Seumas knew he would have no trouble with gentle Kathleen.

She would not, she said, let him alone. She said why she wouldn't and it took her five minutes to say it.

"Bu-but, he's a drinking man, he is," Seumas said with appeal. "He drinks like a fish and he be no good at all."

"Aye," said Kathleen, "and that coming from 'your' lips is quite a mercy on your soul for the narrow- ness of your heart. You've little to do to speak of that when it's in your own grog he drinks. And it isn't true that he's no good. He's the best newspaper man in the town. And I like him. I love him!"

The debate had reached a point where Seumas realized he would have to assert himself. He leaned forward in his chair. He flassed soft- ly. "I could break him. You know my power when I want to use it. Frame him! How would you like that?"

But Kathleen never moved. She looked at her father boldly. "Aye," she said. "Well, two can play at that game—if it's a fight you're look- ing for!" And with that she ran out of the room and out of the house and he didn't see her for days. The shame of it!

"I want to see her just try and marry that spalpeen," Seumas said to himself all day on Friday. Cus- tomers heard him as he whispered under his breath. Cry-honestly as was reciting the list of witnesses who would appear when he came up for his license hearing on the morrow and they let him concen- trate.

But Seumas had forgotten all about the hearing until his attorney came down and took him to court. His reception there lulled him to contentment. Mr. Gavan was well thought of up town in certain cir- cles. Not for long, however, did he smile benignly this way and that. His bright green eyes froze to the witness box. For there in the mid- dle of everything sat Adolphus Gon- werz.

Not being familiar with the expe- diencies of the newspaper business Seumas didn't know that Adolphus had merely wandered in there in the course of his routine and that in ten minutes he would be discov- ered by a court attache and thrown out on his neck. Seumas' pain was so great that he beat himself upon the chest. Could Kathleen have been so angry then to put this no- torious exposer onto him?

"I'm going home," he said to his attorney. "I'm sick now. No, I don't care about the license; to hell with it." And so Mr. Gavan went home feeling the power ooze out of him with every step of the way.

Evening came to Seumas Gavan in the little office that he main- tained upstairs. He sat silently be- side the speaking tube that connect- ed his office with the bar and he wished that he had anticipated Kath- leen being at least half an Irish- man. That was just bitter! It made him very sorry. So absorbed was he that he failed to hear the buzzer until its third buzz.

The bartender's voice floated dim- ly to him through the tube:

"Kathleen's come home!"

"Aye," Seumas said noncommit- tally. He was abruptly the old Seumas and he had the look of a hawk over a calf. It would be now! and he would be brief but annihilat- ing. The bartender took up a famil- iar refrain:

"Adolphus Gonwerz wants to know if he's good for your daughter—and he wants to congratulate you on getting your license today, sir!" It was incredible!

"He—have I got it?"

"You have!"

"He is!!!"

Bent Creek

Bent Creek, April 24.- Weather conditions continue cool but the sprin season is dvancing. Spring flowers are blooming. The gardens are being planted. Some are plant- ing corn. Some fear a shortage of tobacco plants, the season has been so unfavorable for plants.

Richard Coleman, M.A. Hunter and C.B. Dixon, who are employed by a branch of the C & O wire force at Covington, spent the week-end with home people here. The cars they live on will move to Balcony Falls this week.

Mrs. C.W. Phelps is spending some time with her nepsew, George M. Dixon, near Appomattox.

Mrs. W. B. Harris will take her small son, Warren to Lynchburg on Wednesday to have his tonsils re- moved.

In reading your latest issue, I see you make mention or the organi- zation of the Sunbeam Band at Lib- erty Baptic church in the year of 1898 by Dr. Georg Braxton Tay- lor and others. When I first read it, it sounded as if the story or the organization was due to Dr. Taylor and Liberty. I thought was in for an argument with you. Mr. Editor. The Sunbam Band was organized by Mrs. Annie E. Elsome, and and Dr. George Braxton Taylor who was paster of the church at that time in the year 1886, at Fairmont Baptist church, Nelson county. A monument was erected over her grave by the Sunbeams, and it bears her pition Mother of Sunbeams Mrs. Elsom was one of the most enthus- iastic Christian workers ever knew. She was the mother of Dr. Percy Elsome, who was well-known in the Baptist denomination (Editor's note —The item referred to in last week's paper told of the first Sunbeam or- ganization at Liberty Baptist, and it did not claim to toll of the begin- nings of the Sunbeam movement elsewhere. Our information was se- cured from newspaper files of that day. We thank our correspondents for her interesting information con- cerning the movement in Nelso, co- unty.)

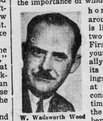
EVERY HOME IS BUILT AROUND ITS WINDOWS

Sponsor of Famous World's Fair Home Points Out Importance of Good Windows

By W. Wadsworth Wood, Director, National Small Home Bureau

New York City.—Few people when they build a new home, seem to realize the importance of windows. Yet every home is built around them. This is literally true in two different ways. First, the frame of your house is actu- ally built around its window open- ings. Take a look at a home under construction some- time. Notice how the framing tim- bers around every window opening are doubled.



W. Wadsworth Wood

Windows Determine Wall Space

Second, the arrangement of your rooms, the arrangement of your fu- niture, is all done around the win- dows. Available wall space is largely determined by windows. On the out- side the architectural harmony is largely determined by the placing or grouping of the windows.

Thus you see how important win- dows are just from appearance alone. But appearance, important as it is, is only half of the story.

Here are some of the other things that a good window should do:

Keep cold air in. Keep warm air in. Keep cool air in. Keep hot air out. Keep insects out. Keep dirt and dust out. Work freely under all conditions without rattling. Provide ventilation when open. Be watertight when closed. Let light in. Give clear vision out. Add beauty to your home. Har- monize with your style of architec- ture.

No other architectural feature in a house must perform so many func- tions.

Electric Farm Kitchen Gives Month's "Vacation" Every Year

It takes only ten minutes to wash and dry your dishes electrically.

By IRA MILLER
Farm Electrification Bureau

IN MANY of my past articles I have pointed out the savings in time, labor and, frequently, expense, that result to the farm wife from the use of major electrical kitchen appli- ances such as an automatic water system, water heater, range, refrig- erator and the like.

Each of those devices greatly eases the burden of life on the farm and, collectively, gives the woman of the house much extra time for leisure or other duties—an electric water system alone can save her the equiv- alent of 30 eight-hour days a year.

She can eliminate at least another month of eight-hour days from her kitchen duties by installing an elec- trical dishwasher, a device not men- tioned before in this column. For, in the average household (comprising two adults and two children), more than 12,000 pounds—six tons—of tableware must be washed every year! Not only does this involve a terrific amount of labor but also it is practically impossible to avoid unsightly red and chapped hands.

Further, eminent health author- ities have proved that tableware is a carrier of disease germs and that the dishpan is one of their favorite breeding places. Sickness and disease thus can be transmitted from one member of the family to another through table utensils, unless they are thoroughly washed in water, scalding hot—which is much too hot to be endured by human hands.

An electric dishwasher, at an op- erating cost of less than a penny a day, completely does away with all of the foregoing objections. Using it, all dishes, chinaware, glassware, sil- verware, pots and pans are washed, rinsed and dried in about ten min- utes by the turn of a switch. Scald- ing water makes them spotless and kills the germs. The dishes dry them- selves, and the dishwasher cleans and dries itself at the same time—your hands never touch dishwater.

As you prepare over 1,100 meals a year, minor electrical appliances— food mixer, percolator, juice extrac- tor, roaster, toaster, waffle iron, grill, ice-cream freezer and many other— undoubtedly can save you another month of eight-hour days in the kitchen each year, in addition to enabling you to do your work more easily and conveniently.

Thus, with an all-electric kitchen, for a few cents a day you can give yourself a full month's "vacation" of 24-hour days, or a quarter-year or 6-hour days, from the monotonous and wearisome task of preparing meals and "ridding up" after them.

ISAIAH COMFORTS AN AFFLICTED PEOPLE

LESSON TEXT—Isaiah 40:1-11.

GOLDEN TEXT—God is our refuge and strength, a very present help in trouble.—Ps. 46:1.

"Comfort—yes, comfort ye my people, saith the Lord," knowing as I do can the great heart sob of pain, and disappointment of men arises to Him from His people everywhere. No study of the Word which omits His tender spirit of comfort is any sense com- plete. No teacher or preacher who fails to bring that message to his people is declaring the full counsel of God. No more appropriate pas- sage could be chosen for presenting the truth that Isaiah 40.

The prophet spoke to a people who were experiencing the bitter treat- ment of their enemies. They were facing the devastation of their coun- try and the deportation of its people into captivity. In such a desperate hour one might say that there could be no word of comfort; but not so the Lord, which omits His tender spirit of comfort is in
